Keynote and Other Speaking Topic Descriptions

Making the Impossible Possible: Overcoming Roadblocks, Challenges and "Nos"

Have you ever found the perception of your disability discourages you from reaching for your dreams? Often, roadblocks, challenges, and being told "no" can stop you in your tracks.

More often than not, these limiting beliefs stem just as much from our own internal dialogue as they do from an outside source. Perhaps the most profound and essential step in making our dreams a reality is our ability to transform these inner roadblocks into tools for moving through our fears and finding motivation for success.

With humor and edgy honesty, Barton and Megan Cutter will redefine the perspective through which you see possibilities by sharing specific strategies to move through your fears and achieve your dreams.

This session will offer a forum for open conversation and engaged learning for you to rediscover your capacity to embrace what can become possible. This workshop will leave you inspired, motivated and ready to jump into action.

Opening to Life: Reaching Beyond Boundaries, Limitations, and Challenges

"Opening to Life: Reaching Beyond Boundaries, Limitations, and Challenges" explores what it means to embrace life to its fullest. What are limitations that we place on ourselves everyday? How do they hold us back? So often, we become paralyzed in the unknown, afraid we may fail or unintentionally sabotage success.

For Barton Cutter, never accepting the words "no" as an automatic response to a challenging situation has enabled him to move beyond the expectations set before him and step into a life where each moment becomes a full expression of his ultimate value and purpose.

Each one of us can follow our passions and open ourselves to achieve our own sense of purpose that positively impacts our community. Discover your own tools and resources to overcome the obstacles that keep you from living your dreams.

The Persistent Heart: Building Collaboration Through Leading by Example

Who is the one in you that inspires others to be their best selves? Often, the way we see ourselves in relation to our life's vision and our own actions determines the willingness of others to combine forces and engage in a common goal. Our actions as well as how we carry ourselves in the midst of challenges brings our colleagues and community members to engage in a shared project, purpose or vision.

In this talk, Barton and Megan Cutter will explore how fostering a sense of curiosity and collaboration allows for learning even in the midst of failure, which, if shaped and honed, will eventually lead to greater success. They will share how we can all show up in our work more fully and the aspects that allow a community to continually evolve, while empowering each member to utilize their strengths. Develop a collaborative process that fosters innovative solutions, builds natural support and trust among your community and opens pathways to continued development for all team members.

Discover the taproot of your potential to empower yourself and those around you by finding the courage to be your best!

Beyond Words: Communicating Through Love and Life

Each of us has our own personal vision in the world, a passion that gets us up each morning. How we transform our personal vision into lasting change rests on our capacity to generate engagement at all levels of community whether it's with your spouse, family, community or beyond. Once someone knows what's important to them, it becomes easier to let go of assumptions, listen and respect others, and find creative outcomes to conversations.

Through becoming curious about who others are as individuals and as community members, we begin to develop sustainable connections in the community and discover the ways in which those connections develop into deeper relationships. This exploration allows us to foster and support the life and goals we aspire to while encouraging support and inclusion from the greater community.

Telling Your Powerful Story

Each one of us has a story to tell, an experience that is powerful, moving and important, and it may be a different story than other family members or community members. The stories of our lives give us hope and inspiration, and keep us moving forward. Yet, how do we communicate our stories to those we don't know?

In this session, we will explore how to move from the facts of your story to a deeper understanding of how your story has transformed your life and values, techniques to use different expressions of the telling your story depending on your audience, and utilizing the understanding of our transformations to bring forth active living in our everyday lives. Telling our powerful stories can move us from a place of limiting beliefs to discovering passion, vision and mission in our personal and professional lives.

Community Safety and Self Defense

Staying Safe in Your Community is a general presentation on heightening one's personal awareness and the awareness of one's surroundings. Without including specific self-defense techniques, one can use self-awareness tools to avoid dangerous situations and seek help when needed. Techniques include: understanding good touch vs. bad touch, body posture and movement, peripheral vision exercises, intuition, different levels of awareness, and finding a safe space.

DisABLED PROTECTION is a course specifically designed for people with any level of ability. Students in this course are taught to move as they would naturally, using angle, timing and distance to stop an attack rather than speed or muscle strength. Barton is a fourth degree black belt and has over fourteen years experience training in Bujinkan Budo Taijutsu. Budo Taijutsu teaches people to express themselves with the tools they have. This allows each person to find ways to protect themselves and those around them through the use of their own body mechanics despite any limitations.

Barton and Megan Bio

Barton is a professional coach and mentor who uses his humor and uncompromising wit to empower youth with disabilities and their families to discover a clear and powerful vision of their own independence within the community of their choosing. He combines his life experience of living with cerebral palsy and a professional background of youth leadership to support children and families to bring their vision to life through action steps that are both inspiring and practical.

After graduating from The University of Arizona, Barton spent several years spearheading Youth Leaders in Action, an advocacy and leadership program for junior high and high school age youth with disabilities. Under his direction, Youth Leaders in Action developed a leadership curriculum to empower youth with disabilities to advocate for themselves. Further, he was a driving force behind a statewide conference focused on youth with disabilities and post-secondary education in which he united stakeholders with various interests under a common vision to achieve unified goals.

Barton also was the Communications Director for The North Carolina Council on Developmental Disabilities from 2007-2013 and Co-Coordinator for the Lifetime Connections Program with First in Families of North Carolina. From 2011-2012, he was a monthly columnist for The News & Observer Our Lives Column. Today, he continues his work with various organizations while offering coaching and mentoring to private clients.

Megan is a creative writing and expressions facilitator, using writing, visual arts, storytelling and non-verbal expression to support youth and adults of all abilities to tell their powerful story, facilitate communications within a family unit and establish community support networks.

Barton and Megan Cutter

Ink in the Wheels: Stories to Make Love Roll

After graduating from Randolph-Macon Woman's College, Megan worked in corporate marketing until 2005 when she began a full-time writing and teaching practice. In addition, she is a writer, social media strategist and online reputational manager for organizations, small business and individuals.

Currently, Megan teaches one-on-one and group sessions to youth, adults and families of all abilities in addition to writing articles for local publications, including a regular column in the Triangle Natural Awakenings. She is dedicated to providing a space that allows the creative process to evolve in a way that empowers others to recognize their powerful voice and learn how to use it effectively.

Together, Barton and Megan break many barriers and assumptions through being open about their relationship, speaking locally and nationally about disability awareness, inclusionary leadership training, creating healthy relationships, relationships and disabilities, self-defense for people with disabilities, and emergency preparedness.

About the Book: A groundbreaking memoir about love, disability and perseverance, Ink in the Wheels: Stories to Make Love Roll is the inspiring story of Barton and Megan Cutter and their journey to build a successful marriage, despite all of the challenges they face both personally and professionally. Ink in the Wheels: Stories to Make Love Roll delves into topics such as disability and relationships, family influences and dynamics, creating external and internal support networks and direct support staff and the balance of care giving and so much more.

Their inspirational story will show not only how love conquers all, but that having a disability is no reason not to have an amazing life. Until now, there have been few accounts of a couple that addresses the themes of disability, intimacy and marriage. This book provides inspiration and tried and true insights, not only for those with disabilities and their families, but also for all who want to have a stronger relationship.

Barton, who has cerebral palsy, never expected to fall in love, let alone get married. When he first met Megan, she was still grieving over the loss of a relationship and the death of her mother. Watch how their love for one another sustains them through all obstacles, and shows others how they can persevere to discover fulfilling lives, as well.

Disability and Relationships Find New Literary Ground

Recently Released Memoir Ink in the Wheels: Stories to Make Love Roll
Bridges Aspects of Disability, Intimacy and Love

(Raleigh, NC) A new voice for disability and relationships has emerged with the release of Ink in the Wheels: Stories to Make Love Roll www.inkinthewheels.com by S. Barton and Megan M. Cutter. This captivating story discusses the often-taboo topic of disability and inter-ability couples, where one member is impacted by disability, and brings awareness to this sensitive topic.

Ink in the Wheels: Stories to Make Love Roll depicts the unforgettable journey of an inter-ability married couple as they explore the courage and perseverance necessary to thrive in their relationship. It offers hope and encouragement, not only for those who also might be facing these challenges, but also for all who can benefit from the story of building a successful relationship.

Married for eight years, Barton and Megan Cutter work to empower individuals of all abilities to live fully engaged lives. In their latest book, they share the skills that they teach through personal coaching, leadership training and speaking engagements. Among the many topics they speak on are disability awareness, creating healthy relationships, self-defense for people with disabilities and emergency preparedness.

Barton Cutter, who has cerebral palsy, remarks, “While we use the details of our personal lives as a platform to carry the story forward, the underlying message is universal. Our ability as human beings to persevere in the face of a challenge is one that is often overlooked in this day and age. At its core, this book is a reminder to all that they too have the capacity to overcome the challenges they face and experience life with a deeper sense of purpose.”

Inter-ability couples have been getting more attention in recent years as the movement toward full inclusion for people with disabilities takes hold. Yet, few examples of successful inter-ability couples have offered an in-depth portrayal that appeals to general audiences.

The Cutters hope to change that by sharing their own story. They dive into themes of intimacy, family influences and dynamics, creating external and internal support networks, direct support staff and the balance of care giving, losing faith in each other and themselves and finding it again.

Ink in the Wheels: Stories to Make Love Roll is available for $15.97 through Amazon and other leading online bookstores as well as their website www.inkinthewheels.com.

Potential Questions for Interviews, Q/A Sessions

1. What inspired you to write your memoir, and what do you hope to accomplish with it? Tell us a little about your vision for the book.
2. You wrote the book switching points of view between the two of you. What insights do you think that offers the reader? What was the process of merging the perspectives?
3. Barton, in addition to both of you being writers, you're also a life coach. How has that helped to shape not only this book but your lives as well?
4. Being a part of the disability community and being able to share with others your strength and how you overcome challenges is so important to you. Can you share why this aspect of service is so important to you?
5. In your introduction, you mention, "Our intent for these stories is not to serve as an all-encompassing voice for the dreams, hopes, and desires of people with disabilities; or even a model for how inter-ability relationships ought to function. No. We are each unique, and likewise our relationships to others will express themselves differently, although the core of what binds them together may be the same." Can you elaborate?
6. After reading this book, many people will view disability differently. We know that is your vision, to bring change to the world. Tell us, Megan, how were able to see Barton what was beyond physical limitations? Was his disability ever a factor in how you saw him? If so, what was the process in moving beyond it?
7. Poetry is a beautiful part of your book that offers the reader a unique sense of intimacy. Barton, the first poem you gave to Megan on her birthday while you were dating is fabulous. Tell us how poetry provides such influence for you and how it has become a tradition throughout the years. How does poetry strengthen your relationship?
8. Megan, you were recovering from the death of your mother as well as a failed relationship when you first met Barton. Tell our audience a little more on that.
9. Megan, you've mentioned that it's easy for others to see you as the caregiver in the relationship. In the book, however, you talk about the reciprocity that exists between the two of you. Can you tell us more about that, and how Barton supports you?

Barton and Megan Cutter

10. What do each of you love most about the other?
11. Let's talk about how you met. You met in martial arts training, right? As a person with a disability, can you talk about how you train in a wheelchair? Tell us a little about the martial art that you train in. What has training in Budo Taijutsu given you? Megan, what was your experience training with Barton like? Do you still train together now?
12. You talk in your book about how having an inter-ability marriage is like any other relationship. In fact, you say in your book, "What relationship doesn't have discussions over finances and day-to-day logistics..." Can you elaborate?
13. One of the messages you share is how you planned your life together even over the concerns of your family. Megan, tell us about the letters you and your dad wrote to each other. How did you overcome these concerns? Has that relationship evolved? If so, how?
14. The debate over commitment ceremony vs. marriage is a hot topic for many types of relationships. In the disability community, a main concern is over the loss of benefits and services, right? What made you choose to have a traditional marriage?
15. Barton, one of the highlights early in the book is your choice to walk Megan out of the church. Even though you had been told you would never be able to walk. How did you come to this decision, and what value did you discover in the process?
16. Emergency preparedness takes on a whole new meaning for someone with a disability. Can you share with us your Hurricane Katrina story and how you survived it, as well as what impact it had on your future plans for emergency preparedness?
17. In your book, you break down many stereotypes around intimacy and disability. Megan, why was it so important that you include this chapter? Did you have any reservations?
18. What many might find surprising is how even though the book touches on topics of disability, it is truly a love story. You tell of an instance on Valentine's Day where a couple came over and gave you their roses because they could tell you were so much in love. Any words on how you two still keep the love alive after years of marriage?
19. The final words in your foreword by P.J. Dixon are "Live Free." Tell our audiences what that means to you.
20. Anything you would like to leave our audience with? How can we contact you?

Tips for Interviewing Clarity

Barton and Megan Cutter are excited about the opportunity to share their story and impact those with and without disabilities. Barton's accent due to Cerebral Palsy can be thick and difficult to understand over the airwaves, and below are some tips to assist interviewers in ensuring that Barton's key points are communicated clearly.

One example to look at is: The Breaking Free Show <http://bambuser.com/v/3366426>

- Clarification of Statements in the Moment & Time

Barton's commentary is best in the present moment. While Megan understands 95% of Barton's speech, it's important that Barton maintains his own voice. There may be times when the interviewer may need to ask Barton to repeat his answer. And it's perfectly okay to do so! Please anticipate the need for him to repeat and buffer the time allotted to the interview accordingly. Conversations with Barton occur at one half to two thirds the rate of an average conversation.

- Re-statements

It's inevitable that Barton may say one thing and we may hear another. If Barton needs to correct something, please allow the time for him to do so.

- If there is an interview or session over Skype, and a word or phrase is missed, we can use the Instant Message feature to supplement understanding.

We've also received questions about how to talk about people with disabilities; what is the best language to use. Here is a great resource that looks at People First Language:

Speaking Testimonials

Your presentation was the first time I ever learned about love

"I have to tell you, when you and Barton Cutter spoke at Health Affairs Round Table this summer, I was just really impressed. I didn't really know what to expect. I've been to nearly all of our presentations over the last 9 years and can honestly tell you that your presentation was the first time I ever learned about love at one of our meetings. Thanks so much!!! It was awesome!"
~ Tobi Glovinsky Bowen, President, Everything Made Special, Marketing and Events

Barton and Megan are challenging our very idea of disability

"Barton absolutely refuses to have his disability define him. He is modeling what it looks like to not only have a calling but to act on it. If you are lucky enough to meet him you will see that both he and Megan are challenging our very idea of disability."

~ Kate Roske, CTI Instructor

Barton blew me out of the water

"With Barton's insight, intuition, and an uncanny incisiveness that comes straight from the heart, Barton blew me out of the water. The man can coach. If you know it's time to get on with becoming who you were meant to be, if you are really ready to take action, if you are willing to be challenged and take ownership of and responsibility for your life, you will find your time with Barton Cutter well spent."

~Ken Mossman, CTI Faculty

Megan created a safe and encouraging space

"Megan successfully created a safe and encouraging space for the campers to share their creations, and the result was amazing to see! Some of the campers completely opened up in ways we would have never seen."

They are the definition of self-advocacy for individuals with developmental disabilities

"Barton and Megan Cutter of Raleigh urged adults with disabilities to reach within themselves to carve out the lives that they want. They are the definition of self-advocacy for individuals with developmental disabilities!"

~ Chuck, "Real Lives, Real Relationships Keynote Address," Parkersburg, WV, September, 2009.

This is a book that shatters all paradigms about the limits
we set for ourselves and project onto others

"This is a book that shatters all paradigms about the limits we set for ourselves and project onto others. It's a love story, an existential crisis and an epiphany - the holy trinity of non-fiction. It will challenge your perceptions of those who are differently-abled. Regardless of how radical and progressive you believed you were before about inclusion, you will finish this book with new enlightenment."

~ Debby Torres, Author Everybody's Blog

It's the candor of revealing everything so freely that exudes
a certain kind of unparalleled courage and charisma

"As I was reading this book, I found myself continually impressed at their amazing honesty and frankness; it's the candor of revealing everything so freely that exudes a certain kind of unparalleled courage and charisma—leaving everyone who reads their story inspired and thoroughly impressed."
